Guest of Honour

Liz Cameron

Director and Chief Executive, Scottish Chambers of Commerce

In this role Liz has spearheaded a range of business growth initiatives. She is widely recognised as one of the most influential forces in Scotland's business community. Awarded an OBE in the Queen's New Year's Honours List in 2014 for her services to business, she has also received an Honorary Doctorate from University of the West of Scotland describing her as having an "unyielding commitment to promoting Scotland as a great place for business." Having successfully established and run several small businesses, Liz took the helm at the Scottish Chambers in 2004.

A sought after business voice, she represents the Scottish business community nationally and has taken a personal interest in promoting Scotland internationally, from Europe to China to India. Liz's expertise is widely acclaimed by her peers and industry. Those who know her and have worked with her, cite her ability to hold the attention of senior people in business and government and to see the bigger picture in everything she takes on. Liz is Chair of wEvolution, a global charity promoting entrepreneurship and is a member of the TEDx Glasgow Brain Trust.

The History of Academic Regalia

The colourful robes, hats and hoods worn by college staff and graduates at today's ceremony are an important part of the academic experience and rooted in historical origin and significance.

During the Middle Ages, scholars at the earliest English and European universities wore wool or fur garments to stay warm in the drafty, stone buildings that were poorly heated. Most of the scholars were also monks or priests, and as such had the hair shaved from the crowns of their heads in the distinctive clerical tonsure. Most wore cloaks that included a hood that could be pulled up to keep their heads warm. The academic gowns and hoods were adapted from both secular and clerical garments of the time, and the hood was chosen by the early scholars to indicate by colour, trim or binding the degree held by the wearer.

The hood is the most distinctive feature of academic dress, which through colour and design may indicate the wearer's diploma/degree and the institution at which that diploma/degree was earned. Students graduating today from City of Glasgow College mainly wear hoods in the colours of SQA as it is the awarding body of our Higher National Certificate and Higher National Diploma courses.
